AND THE WIND WHISPERED

As the wind blew through the war-torn village
in the Black Forest
A child was reading Brothers Grimm fairy tales to escape the horror

To live inside of dreams and fantasies.
And the Wind whispered, "What do you want to be?"

And the child answered, "All I want is to be – Me".

And the wind blew through the city
Hard work, no time for dreams and fantasies.

The child grew to become a teen.
While reading Goethe, a German poet
A tiny seed fell to the ground to grow
And the teen asked, "How long will this journey take, to be Me?"

A life-time whispered the Wind.

And the wind blew through the city,
Playing soccer with the weeds

And the child grew to be an adult
Reading today's American poetry
"People still believe in dreams. Will they read?"
They will listen; it is in you, the child, the teen,
the adult

Stand up and say what is on your mind....

And the wind never whispered again.

Helga Gross
