“Every road in the park was damaged by flash floods, and it took two months to open the first road into the park. Now most of the main roads are open, so it’s a great time to come visit!”

As of mid-February, the temporary lake, informally known as Lake Manly, is about six miles long, 3 miles wide and one foot deep. It may only be deep enough to kayak for a couple weeks. However, park rangers believe the shallow lake will still create beautiful reflections through April.

Park rangers urge visitors to stay safe and to minimize their impact by following a few rules. Parking lots may be full. If parking on a road shoulder, drivers should be cautious of soft shoulders and ensure they are fully out of the driving lane. Footprints in the lakeshore can last for years. People should walk on established pathways. All hotels and most campgrounds in the park are open. Paved roads are open to most of the park’s primary features, including the temporary lake in Badwater Basin. The National Park Service is continuing to work on secondary roads, many of which are still closed due to flood damage. Full information is at nps.gov/deva.

Se han reportado robos y pérdidas de equipos en el Valle. Si es una víctima no denunciada o tiene algún conocimiento, llame al 775-751-7000 y pregunte por el ayudante Joshua Weaver. Y tenga cuidado con el comportamiento inusual en su vecindario.

"Todas las carreteras del parque Death Valley resultaron dañadas por las inundaciones repentinas y se necesitaron dos meses para abrir la primera carretera hacia el parque. Ahora la mayoría de las carreteras principales están abiertas, ¡así que es un buen momento para venir a visitarnos!

A mediados de febrero, el lago temporal, conocido informalmente como Lago Manly, tiene aproximadamente seis millas de largo, 3 millas de ancho y un pie de profundidad. Puede que sólo sea lo suficientemente profundo como para navegar en kayak durante un par de semanas. Sin embargo, los guardaparques creen que el lago poco profundo seguirá creando hermosos reflejos hasta abril.

Los guardaparques instan a los visitantes a mantenerse seguros y minimizar su impacto siguiendo algunas reglas. Los estacionamientos pueden estar llenos. Si estaciona en un arcén de la carretera, los conductores deben tener cuidado con los arcones blandos y asegurarse de estar completamente fuera del carril de conducción. Las huellas en la orilla del lago pueden durar años. La gente debe caminar por caminos establecidos.

Todos los hoteles y la mayoría de los campamentos del parque están abiertos. Hay caminos pavimentados abiertos a la mayoría de las características principales del parque, incluido el lago temporal en Badwater Basin. El Servicio de Parques Nacionales continúa trabajando en las carreteras secundarias, muchas de las cuales todavía están cerradas debido a los daños de las inundaciones. La información completa está en nps.gov/deva.
